CREW AND PASSENGER TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS." DEAR SIR. - I was to-day reading over your mail supplement of March 5th and exme no ost an abstract from the Poking Gazette which amused me immensely. It was a report submitted to the Throne respecting the services randered by Lieutenant Wel Chen Sliong in connection with the wrock of the British steamer Paladin, on the Paradels, in October, 1832. It is typically Chinese, and to put it mildly a series of iuscou racies from beginning to end: To begin with, Wei Chen Shong was not in command of the guuboat Suitsing at the time of the occurrence; he was probably what we then termed the First Mandarin, two officials being attached to the gunboat to transact business with the officials on shore, and convey saiding orders to the captain, who at that time was Capt. Caller, at present. I believe, harbour master at P. rt Arthur. The Suitsing was lying at a place called Samah when we received news that some ships rocked

THRILLING EXPERIENCE OF TH REV. J. PARKER.

HIS ESCAPS FROM THE REBELS. The Chinese Reporder publishes a long account ov the Rev. J. Parker, who was at Chao vang when the rebellion broke out, of his escape from the rebels and his thrilling experience. The clarm of the approach of the robbers, or rebels, was given on the night of the 12th November, but Mr. Parker did not credit the reports sufficiently to leave at once. The 13th was passed in a state of painful uncortainty, and at day break on the 14th the word was given that the robbers had come. The parrative proceeds:-

Our helpless condition also was a good mark for ridicule and insult. There were such a number of men abroad in bands of threes and fours, with old muskets, flint-looks and spears, who seemed ready for any mischief and bent on plunder. Their looks and words as we passed them were snything but reassuring. But my plan was always to keep straight on answer their questions civilly, and neither by stopping nor appearance of fear give them the least advantage to begin a row.
